

Yakshi

Yakshi's Annual Report (April 2024 – March 2025) highlights both the organisation's intensive and impactful community engagement work and the rigorous internal organisational development processes undertaken throughout the year. Our community work on social justice, agroecology for family food autonomy and constitutional values in praxis, empowered young women community organisers to amplify the work with diverse marginalised communities across 8 districts of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana. The organisational development work was initiated with an environmental scanning process, which involved in-depth dialogues and conversations with over 40 civil society members connected to our work with marginalised communities.

Our Programs: 2024-25

Popular Education

The program continued to build the agency of young Adivasi, Dalit, OBC and Muslim women from Andhra Pradesh and Telangana who joined the program in 2022-23:

35 Dalit-OBC-Muslim constitutional values in praxis fellows from Sangareddy and Medak districts, explored the theme of 'gender, internalized patriarchy, body politics and self-care', and developed SMART (specific, measurable, achievable, realistic and timebound) indicators of transformation that demonstrated actions that challenged internalised patriarchy at individual, family, community and village levels. This cohort of constitutional fellows, developed their knowledge on agroecology through participation in a series of agroecological workshops titled "Our Food – Our Control": Husbands, mothers and fathers joined in the program on agroecology for family food sovereignty', and developed detailed farm designs.

16 Dalit young women organisers Tirupati district (Andhra from Pradesh), and 15 young OBC, Dalit and Muslim constitutional values in praxis fellows from Sangareddy and Medak districts (Telangana) participated in separate Theatre of the Oppressed workshops, through which they evolved their own plays in forum format. These explored gender and caste based violence experienced within their homes and in their villages.

80 Adivasi, Dalit, OBC and Muslim women community organisers participated in a peer learning workshop titled "Reflecting on our Praxis". Learning from one another, through up many new ideas, Deep Learning was made exploring structural oppression through an intersectional lens.

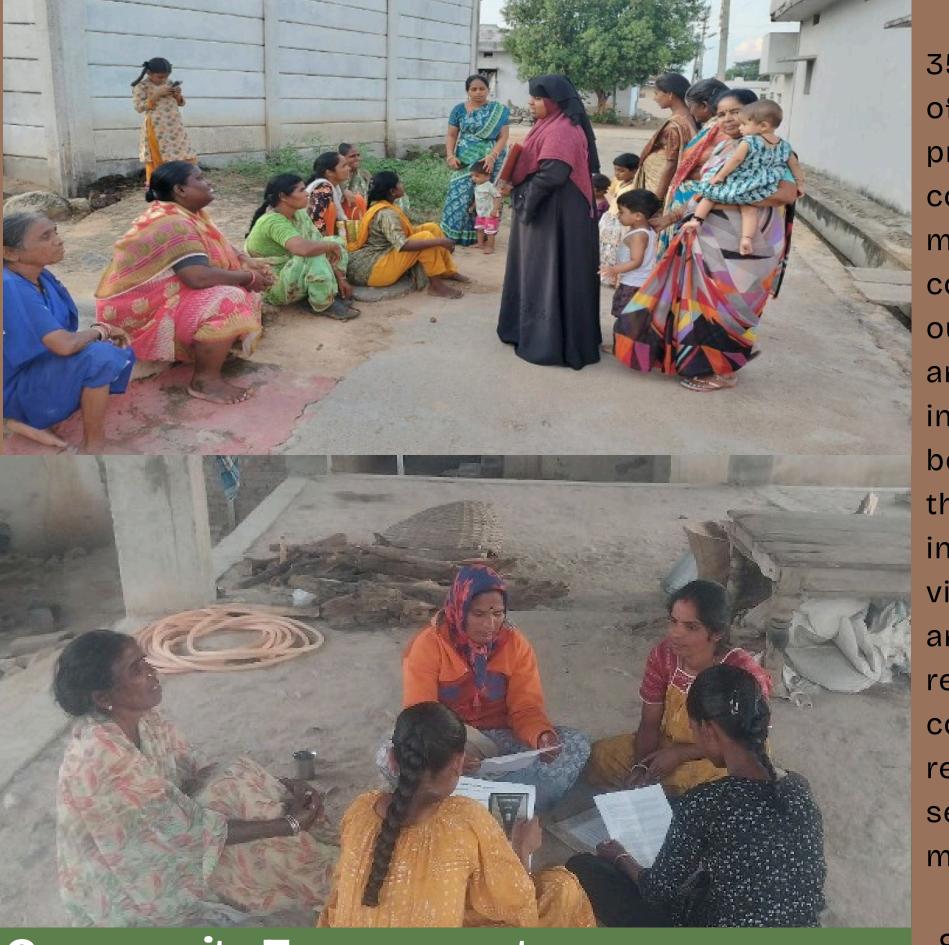

In February 2025, Yakshi hosted a Peer Learning Event for 9 organisations, including Yakshi, selected for the Rukma-bai Pot Award for their work with young married women

Community Engagement:

Building Food and Climate Resilience

Food and ecological destruction continues to be powerfully resisted and reversed. In over 150 adivasi villages, nearly 2000 families across 5 districts, are asserting adivasi world view buen vivir, which Yakshi has pro-actively nurtured in the current generation of adivasi youth. This has translated into adivasi families meeting their food needs, through diverse food farming on their lands, with concrete reduction in commercial commodity crops. Food farming by Dalit women in Tirupati, is being sustained by a second generation of young organisers, and in over 20 villages, community seed banks are functioning as critical means to build food and climate resilience. Dalit women expanded collective farming of food crops, to 6 more villages, where labour sharing is a core value and praxis. In Sangreddy and Medak 20 more families drew up their agroecological plans for the upcoming monsoon season of 2025, and focused on building the soils of their land, with diverse composting methods. 50 new kitchen gardens. Through the month of October 2024, 2000 adults, children and youth across 8 districts were involved in an intensive dialogue on food

Community Engagement

Constitutional Values in Praxis

35 constitutional fellows from Sangareddy and Medak districts of Telangana districts, work to put constitutional values into praxis across 18th villages.. They have been organizing community meetings with youth, women and children of communities to create marginalised awareness constitutional values and their praxis. This year they reached out to about 500 adults, youth, children. Constitutional fellows are transforming themselves, and their communities. Their intervention in the villages to reduce domestic violence has become a support system for women in the villages. This year they addressed 80 cases, of DV. Group Fellows are consistently intervening in their villages through community house to house visits to identify the common issues, organising communities around these common issues, creating awareness about the relationship between the problem and constitutional mandates/ commitments, collectivising community to assert pressure on relevant authorities to seek redressal where appropriate, and secure entitlements where denied, and dynamising women and men to participate in Gramsabhas.

9 Individual Constitutional Fellows from the fields of law, arts, and education are advancing constitutional values in their own fields of work.

Scholarships for students from Marginalised Communities.

Yakshi supported 2 volunteer teachers in the primary schools of Badampet and Panyal, villages of Hathnoora Mandal, Sangareddy district, Telangana state.

Yakshi's strategic planning process, facilitated by a team of resource persons, was initiated through a comprehensive process of external environmental scanning which included intensive dialogues with a wide spectrum of civil society actors and community members. This helped Yakshi revisit the context of its work. Since its founding in 1993, Yakshi has worked primarily with Adivasi communities, and over the past decade, has expanded its engagement to include other marginalized rural communities across Andhra Pradesh and Telangana. This reflective process enabled Yakshi to identify emerging challenges and shifting dynamics across the socio-economic and ecological landscapes of the region. It set the stage for a final in-person interaction and then transition to the internal scanning step of strategic discovery and planning which paved the way for reimagining Yakshi.
